Thank you for bearing with my back-to-back posts in getting the word out to people who knew these two practical people with a 'common touch'. Hopefully, it brought back happy times.

"Thank you so much to all of you for coming to dad's funeral.

We learnt so much about him from you all, which is a very special thing to be able to do when saying goodbye.

It meant a lot to us that you took the time to come and share the farewell with us.

It's so cool that dad is somehow still 'working' through what you do! Thanks for keeping him alive like that.

Warmest wishes,
Karen"

=== Comment: Peter Rees ===

"I appreciate you sending those photos through. I'm familiar with many of the names but rarely met any of them. Neville wasn't ever a very social person outside hours. He saw his role as looking after his family and his garden.

Best wishes and thanks for attending.

Regards
Peter"

I have always liked the idea of transparency from the undergraduate days. You never know when you will be interrupted and have to leave things for yourself or someone else to continue in the future. It is good to keep your project organised as you go. Less "propagation delay" in it.
